KCGM's Community Reference Group seeks new members

KCGM's Community Reference Group (CRG) is keen to welcome new members in 2020, with interested Kalgoorlie-Boulder residents invited to express their interest by May 31.

Established over 20 years ago, the CRG represents and is chaired by members of the local community who meet monthly to discuss operational impacts, future developments and potential opportunities for Kalgoorlie-Boulder.

CRG Chair Susan Owen said community members with a passion for Kalgoorlie-Boulder, and interest in the social and economic impacts of mining locally were encouraged to apply.

"KCGM's CRG aims to act as voice for the Kalgoorlie-Boulder community to KCGM, providing input on the company's current operations, community partnerships, growth projects and community engagement," Susan said.

"We're looking for people with strong community connections who can discuss issues with their networks, provide feedback to KCGM, and help collaborate resolutions."

"Whether you're a small business owner, community group member or have a large social network, we're keen to find a good representation of the community to explore issues that matter most to Kalgoorlie-Boulder, and what role KCGM can play."

KCGM General Manager Kous Kirsten said the CRG was a meaningful way for KCGM to connect with one of the company's most important stakeholders - the Kalgoorlie-Boulder community.

"KCGM has been a part of the Kalgoorlie-Boulder community for over 30 years, and we plan to be here for many years to come," Kous said.

"The CRG is a valuable mechanism for KCGM to connect with the local community, ensuring feedback is considered and incorporated into our operations."

CRG application forms can be found on KCGM's website at www.superpit.com.au/community. Applications close on 31 May and will be voted on by the current CRG.
